Execute command in background using PHP I have an HTML form on my website that collects data from user. I also have an API that I am connecting to that does some operations on that data. In my API, I want to execute commands that will write the result to a file. I know how to do this in a shell script: `#!/bin/sh result=`some_command` echo $result > output.txt` In this case I just want to execute `some_command` in the background, and return the result in a shell script. Is there a way to accomplish this? A: I've added a small shell script that uses phpseclib to grab the last entered line as output of previous command, and redirects it into a file. If you're logged in as a non-root user, the shell script is executed under the context of that user (except for system commands). I've added exit 0 at the end of the script, because it's better practice to always return 0 in a shell script.

script.php <?php require __DIR__ . '/vendor/autoload.php'; use phpseclib\Crypt\RSA; use phpseclib\Math\BigInteger; $private f988f36e3a
